“We’re closer than you think!”

Kemptville is growing and we want to be part of it

Locally owned and operated by long-time residents Ken Baird and Shelley Stinson, the South Branch Bistro is the new name for a popular dining spot in Downtown Kemptville.

“The atmosphere of the building is amazing,” says Ken Baird, co-owner, “Absolutely, the downtown location is perfect.”

“Now that downtown has started to grow again, with new businesses moving in, fixing up heritage buildings and opening up lawyers offices, professional offices... It’s a great combination having a great restaurant downtown.

“Our location is great,” says Ken’s wife and partner Shelley Stinson. “A busy intersection, we can see the water, our building’s got great visibility. And we love walking downtown.”

“We’ve renovated, and re-opened for business,” added Ken. “We’re now open seven days a week, and nopen for lunch and breakfast, as well.” The couple hopes to build on the previous business clientele, hoping to attract new ones in the process.

“We think the South Branch Bistro gives people a choice so they don’t have to drive in to the city.”
